

SOME people pay 8 cents, 10 cents, 25 cents for a small cake of soap simply because it is called "toilet" soap.

Others pay 5 cents for a six-ounce cake of Ivory Soap because they know that better soap cannot be made.

Ivory Soap is pleasant to use. It does not harm the tenderest skin. It lathers freely. It rinses easily. It is made of the finest materials to be had. It floats.

No soap can do more no matter what its price.

As the Editor Sees It

Some times the editor "sees it" and some times he doesn't but he writes right along just the same, for he is expected to see everything and know everything and tell everything he both sees and knows. But he doesn't. If he were to publish everything he sees and spread everything he knows a cyclone would be mild in comparison to the storm that would sweep over the community. And yet our fair bailiwick is no worse than the normal community the world over. But few people ever realize the amount of patience and discretion the average publisher must observe. He hears and sees many things. Their publication could serve no legitimate purpose, could result in no good whatever to the community, could be of benefit to no human being, but on the contrary would bring grief and suffering to many innocent people. It is in such matters that the humane publisher tempers his actions with mercy and abulterates them with the milk of human kindness. Yet but little of this consideration is ever extended to the publishers themselves.

There never was a candidate for public office but who was exceedingly anxious to win the good will and the votes of the people on election day. There never was an intelligent voter but who was equally anxious to know something of that candidate, of his qualifications, of his views, and of his ability to make good. No candidate can possibly expect to meet every voter face to face, and but few of them ever meet the majority. It thus becomes necessary to take them on faith or by reputation, a proceeding that is not overly satisfactory to the voter—at least to the voter with brains. The simple and effective method, therefore, of bringing the voter and candidate together is through the medium of the local newspaper, and of late years this fact appears to have been thoroughly impressed upon the minds of the wide awake voter for public favor. No candidate can do better than to speak to the people through the columns of his home newspaper. The very fact that he does so is evidence of the fact that he is open and above board with the people whose friendship and support he seeks. The editor of this paper suggests to the candidates that the time is opportune to take the people into their confidence and let them know just where they stand on the local issues of the day—just what they are willing to do for the good of the community which they hope to serve. The cost of space for this purpose is so small in proportion to the benefits derived that the preponderance of weight is all on the side of publicity. Come to life, people, and let us know who you are, what you want, and where you stand. The people are waiting to hear from you.

Traveling Man's Experience.
In the summer of 1888 I had a very severe attack of cholera morbus. Two physicians worked over me from four a. m. to six p. m. without giving me any relief, and then told me they did not expect me to live; that I had best telegraph for my family. Instead of doing so, I gave the hotel porter fifty cents and told him to buy me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and take no substitute. I took a double dose according to the directions and went to sleep after the second dose. Loud in Praise of New and Novel Discovery.

As a living testimonial to the old adage "Good things tell their own story" is Mr. Oscar McCormick, of Bernie, Mo., who has the best of reasons for praising a wonderful preparation called "Hays' Specific," which is now on sale by one of our prominent drug firms.

In a volunteer statement, Mr. McCormick says: "I was almost dead—hardly able to be up at all. My back and kidneys were in an awful shape. I took two bottles of 'Hays' Specific' and it actually cured me. I now weigh fifteen pounds more than I have ever weighed. I know it is the best medicine I ever used."

This wonderful preparation is now being sold by M. E. Reddy.
